

Concern over Abuse at Work

The Community & District Nursing Association has expressed concern at the figures released by the BMA, which reveal that one in three doctors are victims of abuse at work.

The CDNA has long campaigned for increased safety at work for its members, and the latest figures emphasises the risk faced by health workers. The CDNA backed the NHS Security Awareness Month in November which urges NHS staff not to see .

We would like your feedback on your own experiences at work in the community You often work anti-social hours and in the dark and in peoples homes therefore the risks you face are high. The results will be presented to the Department of Health, in order for increased protection for NHS staff. Please take a moment to let us know your views.
